Advances in Blood and Marrow Transplantation 2017 Symposium • Saturday, April 22

Course director
Joseph McGurk, DO, Professor of Medicine, Speas/Schutte Endowed Professor in Hematologic Malignancies; Division Director, Hematologic Malignancies and Cellular Therapeutics; Medical Director, Blood and Marrow Transplantation

Course description
This continuing education offering will review the latest advances in the field of autologous and allogeneic transplantation. In this program, we will explore the current state-of-the-art treatment strategies, clinical trials research and outcomes of both autologous and allogeneic related and unrelated donor transplants to aid in your clinical decision making. We will discuss optimal pathways of care for patients with highly variable and complex hematologic malignancies.

• Discuss the evolving role and advancements in the fields of autologous and allogeneic hematopoietic stem cell transplantation (HSCT) and cellular therapies.
• Discuss the advancements of alternative donor transplantation.
• Discuss the importance of risk stratification in treatment decisions for patients with acute and chronic leukemia, lymphoma, multiple myeloma and bone marrow failure syndromes.
• Evaluate the relative importance of age, disease status, cytogenetics and molecular markers as prognostic and predictive factors for patients with hematologic malignancies.
• Articulate the influence of HLA-typing at diagnosis and the timing of HSCT on posttransplant outcomes.
• Discuss and assess treatment options and strategies for patients who are over 60 years of age.
• Discuss and assess optimal treatment strategies and supportive care in the posttransplant phase.
• Review and discuss the latest clinical trials and novel therapies available for patients with hematologic malignancies and bone marrow failure syndromes.

See online brochure for session learning objectives.

Target audience
