You can help advance the research on memory and aging by participating in the Clinical Cohort. Participation contributes to local and national efforts to advance science to eliminate Alzheimer's disease.

Participation

- Clinical Cohort is a long-term, observational study.
- No treatments or interventions are involved in this study.
- Participation includes two annual study visits: a clinical evaluation and a memory and thinking evaluation.
- Additional assessments could include laboratory blood draws, brain imaging, exercise testing, and lumbar puncture.
